How a Minority Binkes limit a Majority. paper blurts out something that makes the Northern Democracy uncomfortable and should close its mouth on the question of the suppressed vote. The Charleston News and Courier, in discussing a lamonta ble situation in its State, makes this apolo-

There is cerious demoralization to-day in South Carolina on account of the election practices which were so common. There is some little difficulty in making a young man, for example, draw a distinction between the obligation of an oath taken as a juror and the obligation of an oath taken at the polic on election day. oath taken at the polls on election day, or as a witness in the trial for the violation election law. For this reason differ young man who has been raised in South Carolina and cannot be made to understand the delicate distinction between his oath as a jaror in a case be tween white litigants, or between a white man and the State, on the one hand, and his oath in an election case involving colored votes, is entitled to sympathy. He is the victim of his education. He has been taught to believe nothing a crime by which "the minority may continue to be the majority," and he knows that to give false teatimony that will help the domi nant minority will elevate him in the cateem of his neighbors.

Having learned this code of morals, it is difficult to teach the young man the nev trick of telling the truth and acting hon eatly whenever he is sworn. The young men is merely carrying his instruction further than was intended. Ho has been usable to appreciate the fine distinction between the code of morals to be applied to white men, and that prepared to be applied to colored man only.

Admissions of this character will bay no effect on the Doughfaces and Mug wamps. They do not bother themselves about the manner of continuing the mi-nority as a majority. It is enough for them that their party profits by the meth ods employed. They care nothing about the "serious demoralization on account of the election practices which were so common," and have not improved.

Fortunately for the Charleston New and Courier, its well-known devotion to the cause of the triumphant minority per mits it to deliver these little curtain lea tures without being charged with waving the bloody shirt.

What's the Matter with the Massachusett

A veracious statistician reports sixty five thousand widows in Maseachusette half of whom are less than forty years of age. It is not necessary to inquire how the prying man discovered that any of those bereaved ladies have reache any particular age. It is enough to know that so many women experienced in the art of making home happy are left to pine away in their widow's weeds.

What's the matter with the men of the Old Bay State? Has their courage left them? Or don't they know that a good widow is the greatest of prizes, and that almost every widow is a good one? A woman who has been married has learned many things. She knows that a husband has to be humored and how to humor him. She knows all about warming the slippers and preparing the dressing gown. In a manufacturing town in Rhodo Island and an employer paid his workmen $700 on Saturday night in new bills which he secretly marked. On the following Monday $450 of these marked bills were deslippers and preparing the dressing gown. is too expert to get mad every time old man stays out a few minutes after inight. She will even up, to be sure, the table to be a sure, and Carlebad, and will return home She is too expert to get mad every time the old man stays out a few minutes after but sho takes her sweet rayenge in her own time and in her own way.

She is not continually making life a burden about pin money, for that she "saves" from the market allowance. She has things protty much her own way, but she is skillful enough to sugar-coat every nauseous doze. With a widow for a wife a man of peace may avoid more than the ordinary family jars.

Out of sixty-five thousand, it should be possible to get the lambent light and the matured joy of es many happy homes. But the men of Mesenchusetts have no courage, and so these brilliant matches are not struck.

The Jury System Not a Failure. Juries often fail to give such verdicts a public sentiment demands, and this is at once attributed to the failure of the whole jury eystem, though nobody has been in genious to suggest something better to take its place. In many cases those who complain, being honest men, would not do differently under like circumstance for juries are to decide on the evidence and the accused is to have the benefit of any doubts. The people want verdicts against noto: ious wrong-doers, and of late verdicts in such cases have been numerous. Fish and Ward, gentcel bank robbers, went to have been convicted and the Anarchists sentenced to the gailows. The New York Aldermen are in the penitentiary or fugitives from justice. Now Jake Sharp, the purchaser, is on his way to the seclusion. With the exception of the Anarchists, all these men had money and political, influ ence to help them, but that assistance was unavailing. The juries got the evidence, and the people got the verdict. If men of this stamp can be convicted we need not regard the jury system as failure, though juries will not be perfec until men become perfect.

A week later I was summoned as a pall-bearer to attend the obsequies of the deceased chieftsin. The vast concourse that marked the route pursued by the solemn procession had assembled from half the States in the Union. Twenty thousand vaterans of the war lined the streets, and Virginia, New York and Maryland and other States in second to do honor to the

There had never been between us any of those pecuniary relations which I have seen erroneously stated, but a kindliness which went back to our school days and existed when, as youthful solders, we followed together our national standard on the fertile plains of Mexico, and left it planted on the loftilest peak of the snow-clad Cordilleras. I desired especially to return him my thanks for having contributed so greatly to the pacification of the country by insisting as Commander of the army, after the civil war, that the Government should respect the paroles which he had given and the military conventions into which he had entered with the Confederate armies. In reply to my assurance that the Southern poople had always appreciated and estemated him for this just and magnanimous conduct, he wrote, for he was unable to speak, the following words:

I have witnessed since my sickness just what I have wished to see ever since the war—harmony and good feeling between the sections. I have always contended that if there had been nobody left but the soldiers we would have had peace in a year, — and — are the only two that I know of who do not seem to be satisfied on the Southern side. We have some on one who failed to accomplish as much have not had quite full satisfaction. The great majority, too, of these who did not go into the war have long since grown it red of the long controversy. We may now well look forward to a perpetual peace at home and a national airrength that will secure us against any foreign complication. Theoretically, alcohol should never be used in indigestion or in conditions of gastric weakness: practically, every physician of experience or education gives alcohol under just these circumstances, and, very properly, too, gives the stronger alcoholic preparations: instead of the weakner. In typhoid fever we give brandy or whisky in the first stages, almost solely for the purpose of increasing digrestion.

It is also known by those interested in such matters in the profession that beer aids digestion but little, or at all, by means of its alcohol, since that constituent is present in so diluted a form and in such small quantity that it can neither aid digestion to any extent by acting on the coats of the stomach nor retard it by influencing the digestive fluid. It should not be forgotten that while all alcoholic fluids theoretically retard digestion, that beer diges so may be less than branky exhibit. theoretically retard digestion, that been does so much less than brandy or whisky. does so much less than brandy or whisky, owing to its small amount of alcohol, and while, as has already been shown, this fact rather obtains against its use, that this is overcome by the carbonic acid and bitter principles of the beer, which stimulate, excite and act as bitter tonics on the gastric glands.

Beers, to be wholesome, chould, therefore contain carbonic said and bitter principles, the alcohol taking a subservient and almost useless role so far as digestion is concerned.

Virginia, New York and Maryland and other States had come to do honor to the memory of the dead. There was no distinction between citizens that day. All were animated by one sentiment of patriotism. Never in its history had the country been so united as at that moment. If the spirit of the dead here were sensible of the reserves of never sensible at the reserves of never sensible. of the presence of peace and harmony to which his sufferings had so much conwhich his sufferings had so much contributed, his particite soul would have been rewarded for the long agonies he endured; and if any voice that day had sought to enkindle the animosities of the past, it would have been silenced by the anothemas of a million patriots. May I venture to suggest to my competitor that the people of Kentucky, of all political parties, are scarcely more tolerant toward these who seek to revive the bitter memories of the past and engender intolerance and strife among her citizens. [Applause.]

and almost usersee 10.0.

To sum up the results of these experiments, we find that the beers examined vary in their actions as much as thirty-ninc minutes, and that while most beers do not retard digestion in all probability is the stomach, that others aid digestion that others aid digestion.
